Lewis Hazelwood-Horner investigates and documents daily life, often leading the artist and his easel to pubs, farms, and artisan workshops across the UK. This exhibition focuses upon the social rituals of gathering, from unique and familiar moments within pub culture to summertime garden parties. The artist has a keen eye for locating critical moments of action and rendering them in astounding detail. His mature approach to painting enables him to capture subtle expressions that could invite comparison to the greats of the Impressionist era or the likes of Freud and Bacon.

Lewis Hazelwood-Horner was born in 1992 and attended the Byam Shaw School of Art and London Atelier of Representational Art. The talented painter won the Columbia Threadneedle Prize in 2016 and was inducted to the Royal Society of British Artists in 2018.

Thompson's is honoured to represent Lewis Hazelwood-Horner and introduce his first solo exhibition with the gallery.

All paintings are for sale on receipt of this catalogue.
